

Bianca Daswani, MHA, MBA

Bianca Daswani currently serves as the Talent Development Leader for The Harris Center for Mental Health and IDD, the largest behavioral and developmental disability care center in Texas. There, she manages agency-wide clinical rotation, internship, and practicum programs and associated affiliation agreements. Her passion for developing young professionals and utilizing data and evidence-based approaches to enhance operational efficiencies has been an asset to The Harris Center.

Before her current role, Daswani gained unmatched experience as the very first Administrative Fellow at The Harris Center. She is no stranger to “building the plane while flying it,” from operationalizing the fellowship with scarce reference to conceptualizing the organization's first Administrative Internship Program. Daswani holds a Bachelor of Science in Nutritional Sciences from the University of Houston, and a Master of Healthcare Administration and Master of Business Administration in Business Analytics from Texas Woman’s University.

Highly motivated to transform healthcare delivery positively, Bianca Daswani has a strong interest in behavioral health, diversity, equity, and inclusion. She believes that educating oneself on how to lead is as equally important as educating others on how to lead. To this end, she feels passionately about her position in ACHE-SETC as the Cochair of the Mentorship Committee, where she creates more efficient methods for further mentorship engagement. In the future, Daswani looks forward to impacting the quality of patient care and efficiency in health system operations through leadership and management.
