

Eric Sean Clay is a transformational security executive with more than three decades of law enforcement and security experience. Mr. Clay is sought after as an SME in security issues, delivering presentations at international conferences, as well as frequently appearing in national publications and in media interviews on the topic of healthcare security issues. His most recent whitepaper, "The Rise of Workplace Violence: Addressing Healthcare's Greatest Threat," is available online.

Mr. Clay serves as the Vice President of Security Services for Memorial Hermann Health System, providing security leadership for 450 security and law enforcement officers at the system's 17 hospitals and 250 care sites. He is also the current president of the International Association for Healthcare Security and Safety (IAHSS), an association that certifies tens of thousands of healthcare professionals each year.

Mr. Clay has earned a bachelor's degree in criminal justice, a master's degree in criminology, an MBA, and a graduate certificate in police leadership. Mr. Clay has also earned the IAHSS Certified Healthcare Protection Administrator and the ASIS Certified Protection Professional certifications.